5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

We've all seen the viral videos of "Permit Patty" and "BBQ Becky" — white people who have called the cops on or otherwise harassed black people for living their lives. Now, the internet has bestowed yet another moniker to someone: Dubbed "Sidewalk Susie," Theresa Lund's name whirled around the internet this week after she was seen in a video confronting a neighbor, who was with her biracial daughter, saying the two were making too much noise outside Lund's home. One question Lund asked this neighbor in particular has garnered backlash. Read more inside and at metro.us.

INSYS FOUNDER'S INDICTMENT QUESTIONED

1 A federal judge on Tuesday expressed concern about the scope of an indictment against several former Insys Therapeutics Inc. executives accused of bribing doctors to prescribe an opioid and suggested prosecutors streamline the case to avoid its dismissal. U.S. District Judge Allison Burroughs in Boston said she believed the indictment did not contain enough allegations to support a racketeering conspiracy charge against billionaire Insys founder John Kapoor and six other former executives and managers. "The indictment has a core of conduct that's problematic and may be criminal," Burroughs said during a hearing. "I don't know, that's what a trial is for. But I'm having difficulty with the way it's laid out." The indictment charges Kapoor, former Insys Chief Executive Michael Babich and others, with conspiring since 2012 to pay bribes to doctors to prescribe the drugmaker's fentanyl-based cancer pain medication Subsys and to defraud insurers. She believed the indictment lacked sufficient allegations to establish a relationship between the Insys executives and the various doctors accused of taking bribes that would legally support the racketeering charge.

LAWSUIT: OHIO STATE IGNORED SEXUAL ABUSE

2 Four former Ohio State University varsity wrestlers sued the school on Monday, claiming its athletic doctor sexually abused them and others over 20 years and the school failed to stop it. The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Columbus, claimed the university ignored abusive behavior by the late Dr. Richard Strauss and said coaches and higher level officials were aware of his abuse. "The rampant sexual abuse and culture of sexual abuse was reported to Ohio State administrators and to the head of the athletic department," the complaint said. "But these officials turned a blind eye to the abuse." Ohio State said it was aware of the lawsuit and was reviewing the allegations. Not mentioned in the lawsuit was U.S. Rep. Jim Jordan, a former wrestling coach at the university, who was accused earlier this month by several former student wrestlers of failing to stop the molestation even after being told about it. Ian Fury, a spokesman for Jordan, disputed the claims, telling Reuters that the Ohio Republican never saw or heard about any abuse, nor was it ever reported to him while he was a coach.

JOSHUA VS. POVETKIN TO KICK OFF DAZN'S US DEBUT

3 World heavyweight champion Anthony Joshua (right) and challenger Alexander Povetkin were announced as the headline fight for the United States debut of DAZN, the world's largest live and on-demand streaming service, at a press conference in New York City. The fight will take place Sept. 22 at London's Wembley Stadium.

WOMAN SURVIVES ON WATER AFTER CLIFF CRASH

4 An Oregon woman who disappeared a week ago was rescued from the bottom of a California coastal cliff where she survived by drinking water from a spring using a radiator hose from her wrecked sports utility vehicle, authorities said on Saturday. Angela Hernandez, 23, of Portland was found by a pair of hikers late last week after they saw her wrecked Jeep Patriot SUV partially submerged at the bottom of a 200-foot cliff in the Big Sur area, said Monterey County Sheriff's Office spokesman John Thornburg. Her disappearance captured widespread attention after she and her vehicle were last seen on a surveillance camera video at a Carmel gas station on July 6, about 50 miles north of the stretch of Highway 1 where she was found. The hikers discovered Hernandez conscious, breathing and with a shoulder injury, Thornburg said. Rescuers managed to get her up the cliff and to a helicopter which flew her to a nearby hospital. She was in fair and stable condition but appeared to have suffered a concussion during the collision, the California Highway Patrol said in a statement.

COBAIN'S DAUGHTER: END MENTAL HEALTH TABOO

5 Kurt Cobain's daughter said on Tuesday the United States should overcome its taboo about mental health and addiction almost a quarter of century after her rock star father took his own life. Frances Bean Cobain was speaking in Ireland at the launch of a new exhibition of the Nirvana frontman's belongings. Cobain died in 1994 aged 27 from a self-inflicted gunshot while struggling with heroin addiction. "There is an association that is shameful and it shouldn't be," Frances Bean said, who has also struggled with addiction. "It's taboo ... despite the fact that it is present in our society every single day. And I think that in Europe it is a little less taboo, I think in America it is very, very frowned upon," she told Reuters. Frances Bean, Cobain's sister Kim, and mother, Wendy O'Connor, attended the opening of the exhibition at the Museum of Style Icons in Newbridge, 50 km (30 miles) southwest of Dublin. From his sketches and drawings to clothing and a car, "Growing Up Kurt Cobain" displays dozens of Cobain's personal items, some of them never seen before by the public.

‘Sidewalk Susie’ apologizes after inappropriate comments go viral

Theresa Lund was seen in a video asking a neighbor if she lived in “the affordable” units.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Joining the notorious Permit Patty and BBQ Becky, a local woman is being criticized after a racially insensitive rant went viral.

In a video posted to Facebook July 14 and picked up by the Boston Globe and other outlets this week, Theresa Lund — dubbed by the internet “Sidewalk Susie” by the internet — is shown asking a neighbor with a biracial daughter if they live in one of the “affordable units” rather than in university housing.

“Y’all, here is another Permit Patty trying to kick me off my own property because she’s having a hard time getting her kids to take a nap at 3:30 in the afternoon on a Saturday,” Alyson Laliberte, the neighbor with whom Lund was speaking, wrote on Facebook.

Lund has since apologized. In an emailed statement to the Globe, Lund said she was “terribly sorry” and that her behavior was “inappropriate and wrong.”

“I want to be accountable for my actions in a situation where I fell far short of my values and what I expect of myself,” Lund said, per the Globe. “This clearly wasn’t my best moment, and I have work to do to more consistently be my best self.”

Lund is the executive director of the Harvard Humanitarian Initiative, a humanitarian crisis research center based at the Department of Global Health and Population within the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health.

“Are you in one of the affordable units, or are you in one of the Harvard units?”
Theresa Lund

According to the HHI website, Lund has more than 15 years of experience in academic leadership and research positions “working to advance our understanding of complex global issues.”

In the beginning of the video, Laliberte can be heard saying, “Did I swear at you?”

“I didn’t swear at you,” Lund responds.

“You just swore,” Laliberte says.

“You heard me wrong,” says Lund.

After a little more back and forth, Lund turns to the daughter, who is out of frame, and says, “You are a sweetheart. I’m sorry that I’m arguing with your mommy. She’s not being very nice.”

Later on in the video, Lund says that she is sitting with Laliberte because Laliberte is preventing Lund’s children from sleeping.

“Are you in one of the affordable units, or are you in one of the Harvard units?” Lund asks. Laliberte responds, “Mind your business.”

Laliberte described the interaction on Facebook as “totally discriminating and racist of her … or maybe it was because my daughter is biracial who knows.”

Lund is now joining a growing list of people called out by the internet for their actions, and receiving a subsequent internet moniker, like “Permit Patty” or “BBQ Becky.”

Permit Patty refers to a white woman who was seen saying that she was calling the police on a black teenager selling water — without a permit, the woman claimed — on a sidewalk in San Francisco.

One of the most viral videos was of the woman dubbed BBQ Becky, aka Jennifer Schulte, who was captured calling the police on a group of black people barbecuing at a park in Oakland. The men said that barbecuing in that area was allowed, while Schulte disagreed. The image of her on the phone decked out in her sunglasses quickly became a meme.

Though Laliberte is not black, her daughter is biracial, which she noted in her Facebook post. Lund was quickly identified after many saw the video.

Trump says he 'misspoke' in Helsinki, has total confidence in US agencies on Russia

President Donald Trump tried Tuesday to calm a storm over his failure to hold Russian President Vladimir Putin accountable for meddling in the 2016 U.S. election, saying he misspoke in a joint news conference in Helsinki on Monday.

Trump stunned the world by shying away from criticizing the Russian leader for Moscow's actions to undermine the election and cast doubt on U.S. intelligence agencies, prompting calls by some U.S. lawmakers for tougher sanctions and other actions to punish Russia.

"I said the word 'would' instead of 'wouldn't,'" Trump told reporters at the White House, more than 24 hours after his appearance with Putin. "The sentence should have been, 'I don't see any reason why it wouldn't be Russia.'"

Trump has been accused of siding with the enemy rather than the U.S. GETTY IMAGES

Trump, who had been given numerous opportunities to publicly rebuke Putin in Helsinki, praised the Russian leader during the news conference for his "strong and powerful" denial of the conclusions of U.S. intelligence agencies that the Russian state meddled in the election.

Although he faced pressure from critics, allied countries and even his own staff to take a tough line, Trump spoke not a single disparaging word in public about Moscow on any of the issues that have brought relations between the two nuclear powers to the lowest ebb since the Cold War.

Republicans and Democrats accused him of siding with an adversary rather than his own country.

Trump said Tuesday he had complete faith in U.S. intelligence agencies and accepted their conclusions, although he insisted Russia's actions had no impact on the outcome.

The firestorm over his performance at the Helsinki news conference has engulfed the administration and spread to his fellow Republicans, eclipsing most of the frequent controversies that have erupted during Trump's turbulent 18 months in office.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell told reporters that Russia was not a friend of the United States and warned against a repeat of the 2016 election meddling.

"There are a lot of us who fully understand what happened in 2016, and it really better not happen again in 2018," McConnell said. REUTERS

4 Air fry recipes to get your kids into veggies

Eating your greens doesn't have to be a chore.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Getting your children to eat healthfully can be an uphill battle. With ads for sugary and fatty fried foods at every turn, their ideas of what delicious food can skew unhealthy. Luckily for parents, air fryers can provide healthful alternatives to the fast food-like kids crave.

Air fryers work by circulating hot air around food created by a mechanical fan. Adding in a small amount of oil produces a crispy layer around the food. Air-frying food at home gives you more control over the ingredients and the fat you consume. Here are four air fry recipes that you can make at home to help your kids fall in love with veggies.

1 Brussels sprouts

The idea that eating Brussels sprouts is just something kids have to do to get dessert will be changed for good after you crisp up your sprouts in an air fryer. Cut a bunch of them in half toss with some olive oil, salt, pepper and garlic powder. Throw them in your air fryer for around 10 minutes at 360 degrees.

2 Crunchy "everything bagel" kale chips

Whenever you speak to anyone who is trying to stay healthy in one form or another, kale usually makes its way into the conversation. Kale's fiber content helps boost blood circulation and aid in digestion. It has also been proved to help reduce diabetes, reduce blood pressure, lower the risk of cancer and even help to prevent asthma.

The sooner you introduce kale into your diet, the better. Use the air fryer to make crunchy kale snacks for your kids. We suggest "everything bagel" crispy kale chips: Shred pieces of kale, toss them with a tiny bit of olive oil, low-sodium soy sauce, salt, garlic powder, poppy seeds and black sesame seeds. Place the coated leaves into the air fryer on high for six minutes and shake periodically. They will be ready to eat once they are crisp.

3 Buffalo cauliflower "wings"

This healthful alternative to buffalo chicken wings will get your kids to love cauliflower. Cut cauliflower into small pieces and mix them in a bowl with an egg. Add salt, pepper, milk and flour. After the "wings" are coated, toss them in the air fryer and cook on 350 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes. To serve, sprinkle buffalo sauce — Frank's RedHot sauce and butter, to be exact — on top..

4 Sweet potato fries

It's an indisputable fact that all children love french fries. But for a more healthful option for your kids, you may want to sub the usual white potatoes for using sweet potatoes. Using your air fryer, you can make perfectly crispy sweet potato fries that will be a hit. Slice a couple of sweet potatoes into strips, mix with a dash of olive oil, add salt and pepper (or brown sugar and cinnamon if you want to go sweet instead of savory) and place in the air fryer, leaving plenty of space for each fry. Set the temperature to 400 degrees for the crispiest outcome.

5 Signs of depression to look out for Learning the symptoms can help save a life.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

With the tragic deaths of celebrities like designer Kate Spade and chef and author Anthony Bourdain, the conversation around depression has become mainstream.

That's progress. Although depression is an illness, and no different from any the many other physical ailments we suffer, there's still a stigma attached to this common mental illness. But those who suffer from depression are no mentally weaker than someone with asthma.

There are varying degrees of the illness, and are many methods of treatment. What works for one person may not work for another.

However, the symptoms of depression are shared by those who suffer from the illness. Here are some signs to look out for.

1 Sadness

You might think sadness would be the most obvious sign of depression, but those in the throes of mental illness, they might not be able to gauge how blue they truly are. They often express it as guilt and self-loathing, or speak of feeling worthless or weak.

2 Lethargy

Lack of motivation and overall lethargy can be a cause for concern. Opting out of a social life or pursuing hobbies or activities they once enjoyed are all things to watch for. Depressed people often lose interest in their careers and even sex. Lack of "spark" or drive could be a red flag.

3 Irritability

On the other hand, someone who is easily bothered by day to day activities may also be suffering. This is a sign men with depression exhibit more often than women, but it can present in both genders.

ISTOCK

4 Physical aches, pains; exhaustion

Chronic, lingering headaches and persistent aches and pains that don't respond to medical treatment can also point to depression. Another physical side effect can be an almost paralyzing exhaustion. This can cause someone to feel tired all day long and not want to get out of bed.

5 Wild appetite swings

Extreme changes in appetite — going from a normal appetite to not eating or to overeating is sometimes how depression manifests. This is evident if the person has a large fluctuation in weight in a short amount of time.

Where to find help

If you or a loved one is showing these signs of depression and may be a danger to themselves, please contact the Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-8255.

An inside look at the Seaport's revamped Lookout Rooftop

Boston's Lookout Rooftop at the Envoy Hotel is bigger and better than ever.

The popular rooftop bar and gem of the Seaport District's nightlife scene recently completed a $4 million expansion and renovation. The venue has grown to 2,500 sq. ft. in size, increasing its capacity to 390, and now features new seating areas so more guests can enjoy breathtaking views of the city throughout the summer and beyond.

"We pushed the boundaries at Lookout Rooftop and the result is just how we envisioned it – unrivaled," Joe Mellia, general manager of the Envoy Hotel, said in a statement. "Our goal was to create a space that is reflective of the transforming Seaport neighborhood around us, while also offering a year-round destination that guests can socialize while sipping delicious cocktails and taking in the unbeatable views of Boston."

In addition to its always Instagram-worthy views of Boston's skyline and waterfront, Lookout Rooftop now has a new lounge area. Dubbed the Harbor Lounge, the secluded space is a reservations-only section, offering a more private setting for VIPs and guests at private events. The Envoy Hotel's fan-favorite rooftop bar also boasts new, shared seating near the main bar.

Beyond the upgraded décor, Lookout Rooftop will soon host a number of special programs and activities throughout the season, including rooftop yoga and other wellness-focused events. The fun doesn't stop at the end of summer, though, as guests can expect the return of the heated igloos during the winter months, which can fit up to 10 guests.

Of course, you can't forget all the great libations at Lookout Rooftop. The bar's beverage program recently received a makeover as well thanks to mixologist Brian McDougal. A slew of tasty, handcrafted cocktails have been added to the menu for the season, including the Seaport Sangria, made with blush wine, peach schnapps, elder flower and pineapple juice; and the Old Cuban, featuring smoked rum, lime juice, bitters, mint and prosecco. Our pick is the grapefruit-infused La Diabla, a citrus forward offering that's perfect for cooling off during the warm summer months.

Next entry in 'Trial & Error' accuses a 'Lady, Killer'

Kristin Chenoweth leads the second season of NBC's comedy anthology series.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

The hit comedy returns this week. ALL PHOTOS NBC

In the spring of 2017, Jeff Astrof ("The New Adventures of Old Christine") and Matt Miller ("Lethal Weapon") gave NBC's audience the gift of a new comedy series titled "Trial & Error." Billed as a satire of true-crime documentaries like Netflix's "Making a Murderer" and HBO's "The Jinx," Astrof and Miller's show promised mockumentary fans they would have something to laugh at.

Sure enough, the first season, which starred John Lithgow as Larry Henderson, a bumbling poetry professor accused of murdering his wife, became a popular diversion for audiences. It wasn't a runaway television success, but its respectable ratings and critical acclaim won it a second season. This one stars Kristin Chenoweth as the new murder suspect and is titled "Lady, Killer."

What is "Trial & Error" about?

Both seasons of "Trial & Error" follow a novice New York lawyer named Josh Segal and the eclectic defense team he assembles in the small town of Peck, South Carolina. In the first season, Segal, along with lead investigator Dwayne Reed and head researcher Anne Flatch, tries and ultimately fails to defend Henderson at trial. Henderson is found guilty and sent to prison, though Segal later discovers that a bird actually killed the wife in a freak accident.

With Henderson's innocence therefore proved, Segal, Reed and Flatch take on Peck's next big murder case. Season two's suspect, the East Peck heiress and popular socialite Lavinia Peck-Foster, who is found with her husband's body stuffed into a suitcase in the trunk of her car.

Kristin Chenoweth

Why you should watch "Trial & Error"

Anyone who's a fan of true-crime documentaries or series covering hot-button issues, like Netflix's "Wild Wild Country," will dig "Trial & Error." Not only do Astrof, Miller and the writing team find and hit all the right beats of the genre, they satirize just as well as "The Office" and "Parks and Recreation" mocked the seemingly happenings of everyday life.

Meet the cast

Obviously, with Chenoweth's addition as the new suspect, Lithgow will not be returning in season two. However, Nicholas D'Agosto, Steven Boyer and Sherri Shepherd are all returning as Segal, Reed and Flatch respectively. "Glee" alum Jayma Mays returns as Carol Anne Keane, Peck's assistant district attorney and Segal's love interest. The second season also sees the addition of Amanda Payton as Nina Rudolph, a podcast host who moves to the area from New York to follow the trial in a manner not unlike NPR's "Serial."

When is it on?

The second season premiere is Thursday, July 19, at 9 p.m. on NBC.

Bill Dubiel is a fantasy football expert at Rotoballer.com and Metro.us

Welcome back fantasy football fans! With training camps getting underway, it's time to start getting ready to chase another championship. Don't forget to check out Rotoballer.com for all of the tools you need to get the edge on your league mates.

Bet on Bears signal-caller

The Bears selected Mitchell Trubisky second overall in 2017 but nobody really had any expectations of immediate success. The team around him was bad, particularly in the receiving corps, and there was simply very little asked of him--it was a run-first team. However, the Bears front office has done its best to get Trubisky the tools he needs to succeed in 2018. Perhaps, most importantly, the Bears hired the vertically-minded Matt Nagy as their head coach, and he'll certainly bring more of a pass-heavy game plan to training camp. They also surrounded Trubisky with weapons, spending a second-round pick on dynamic wideout Anthony Miller and adding former Jaguar WR1 Allen Robinson, athletic tight end Trey Burton and speedster Taylor Gabriel to the offensive mix. The cards are falling in the right place for Trubisky to take a huge leap forward in 2018, which makes him well-worth the late-round flier he'll cost you on draft day if you wait on quarterbacks (and you should).

All about opportunity

After sneaking into the playoffs last year, there is very little chance that the Buffalo Bills will do any contending in 2018. Their offensive line was decimated by retirement and injury, their quarterback situation is murky at best and they simply don't have the roster to contend with the big dogs of the AFC. That certainly doesn't mean there isn't fantasy value to be found, though. Big-bodied wide receiver Kelvin Benjamin is (as of this writing) finally healthy, and as the Bills will likely be playing from behind in many games, the onus will be on Benjamin to help them claw their way back. With career backup A.J. McCarron likely the starting QB in Week 1 and first-round pick Josh Allen waiting in the wings, it's fair to say the Bills have very little to lose by maintaining a conservative game plan. It will still be a run-first team, but they'll need to take their shots in the air if they want to stay in games, and Benjamin should be the main beneficiary, because, well...who else will it be? It's all about opportunity for Benjamin, and that should allow him to return at least low-end WR2, high-end WR3 numbers all season.

Change of scenery hurts Cooks

Brandin Cooks has been a mainstay atop the wide receiver rankings for three years now. He's had three straight seasons of at least 1,000 yards and seven touchdowns, but after being shipped from the Patriots to the Rams in the offseason, his prospects are very likely to dip. There is certainly nothing wrong with the Rams offense–they were the highest-scoring offense in 2017 and ranked in the top 10 in total yards as well. What is unfortunate for Cooks is the role he will likely play. The case can be made that he's the most talented wide receiver on the roster, but as such he'll likely be called on for deep balls and big plays. While that certainly has value, particularly in the touchdown department, that will almost certainly lead to fewer touches. Jared Goff has a rapport and trusts three players who all do their damage down low and across the middle (Todd Gurley, Robert Woods and Cooper Kupp), and Cooks will likely have the role that Sammy Watkins played last year–the big-play threat. In this offense that role will definitely at least muster flex value, but I don't think it's enough to warrant Cooks' current top-50 overall ADP.

Draft sleepers of the week

Nyheim Hines, RB, Indianapolis Colts
The Colts selected Hines in the fourth-round of the draft, but his skill set plus the return of a theoretically healthy Andrew Luck has some experts dreaming of a poor man's Alvin Kamara. In the late rounds, you should absolutely take a shot on that potential.

DeVante Parker, WR, Miami Dolphins
Jarvis Landry is no longer there to hog targets, and Parker is still just 25 years old. He has a great shot at being a post-hype sleeper, and a breakout, 1,000-yard season is definitely possible here.

David Njoku, TE, Cleveland Browns
The Browns didn't select him in the first round last year for him to block. He's a freak athlete and now that there is more stability at the quarterback position he had a great chance to finish the year as a TE1.
